The House resolution relative to the death of George Peachody was concurred in.

The House resolution relating to the erection of an squestrian statue in bronze of Gen. Grant was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. WILLIAMS moved to refer the bill to regulate the muligration of Chinese in the United States to the Committee on Commerce. He explained the object of the bill was to prevent, as far as practicable, the importation of cooles and dissolute Chinese women into the United States by voiding all contracts for their importation, and prohibiting agreements by owners of vessels to transport persons from China except with the persons themselves to be transported. It was the intention to protect the laborers of this country as far as practicable from the presence of that class of degenerate Chinese who were accustomed to subjection to another class of persons, and were compelled to work for wages upon which a free man would starve. He read from California papers extracts descriptive of scenes of bratality which regularly occur upon the arrival from China of ships laden with Chinese limiting inits. This business of importation by contract limiting agedy increased, and our Government, he thought, had the power, and should exercise it, of protecting itself from the encroachments of the rapidly increasing tide of vice and degradation. The bill was only intended to prevent companies here from continuing a contract system with owners of cooles in China.

Mr. COLE (Rep., Ch.) said he would go as far as the Senator from Oregon in excluding, not only from the

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the President, containing the correspondence called for by resolution of the Senate relating to American claims against Great Britain.

On motion of Mr. TRUMBULL (Rep., Ill.), at 2 o'clock the Senate went into Executive Session.

It was after 7 o'clock when the doors were respenced, and the Senate adjourned until the 10th of January.

INCHEASING CONGRESSIONAL REPRESENTATION.

Mr. CULLOM (Rep., III.) addressed the Committee on the subject of the apportionment under the next consus, desting it to be carried out so as to apply to the next Congress, favoring the increase of representatives to at least 200, and intimating that at no distant day there would be an amendment of the Constitution to change the basis of representation in the Senate. He thought that the whole system of representation should be revised, and that a system should be devised whereby all the people, minorities or majorities, should be represented.

Mr. DAWES (Rep., Mass.) replied to the argument of Mr. Cultom. He said he heard with some apprehension that that gentleman not only thought it right, but contemplated an attempt on the part of those who might have the power to break up the original Constitution of that that gentleman not only thought it right, but contemplated an attempt on the part of those who might have the power to break up the original Constitution of this Government. The nation would have had no existence if the sentiment which the gentleman advocated in regard to the Senate had prevailed in 1789. It was a matter of history that of nothing were the States so jealous of as their State existence, and that they came into the Convention, which finally adopted this admirable system of government, on the pledge, not only that their State existence should be recognized, and their equality recognized in the Senate of the United States, but that they should be protected against such change as might be singlested hereafter by any ambitions State or ambitions section of the country, as had now been suggested by the gentleman from Illinois. They had not only provided for the equality of the States in the other branch but each State stipulated that it never should be changed without the consent of each of the States. He admitted to his friends, who spoke of amending the Constitution so as to obliterate that feature of the Government by which the States were recognized in their State espacity in the other branch, this charse in the Constitution (Article 5), "That no State without its consent shall be deprived of its equal suffrage in the Senate."

It will be truly a blessing to the world.

G. M. S. SANDERSON, M. D., Principal, You you go be a principal.

NRW YORK, Nov. 14, 1868. Dr. G. E. Allona.

I have obserically analyzed and carefully examined the new plant which row handed me; and, after a thorough investigation. I have no hasharion in reconsending it to the public as one of the greatest discretizes ever made in medical science. This plant possesses properties as a medicine which do not exist in any hanse here, and is, beyond question, of the greatest value as a medicine. No remedy has ever come under my observation, which i could recommend so conditionally as this. I remain, Ductor,

Your sincere frield.

A. M. GASTEN, Chemist.

[Translation.] PARIS, Irec. 20, 1867, Rue de Ravoli. Dr. G. F. ALZONA, Now York.

PARES, Hec. 20, 1867. Rue de Ravolt.

I have salumitted to the observation of several of the most emirent chromists in Paris the new plant which you recently discovered in the valety of the Amazon. These gentlemes have all pronounced to afthe greatest importance as a medical agent, and have requested me to inform you that they are convinced, other a sufficient quantity can be obtained and properly prepared, that this addition to the medical poarmacopea will be of the numerated the fifth the European and American people.

I am well satisfied, from any own observation, that no discovery in modern times can equal it in importance. You owe it to the world, as a physician and a minimalinopist, to introduce the new remedy at as early a period as possible. I beg to assure you, dust boctor, of my prafonal regards.

With respectful salutations, yours.

K. P. MARGUETTE, Professor of Chemistry.
